TIC TOC 2.0
Joyce Lopez-Enevoldsen, TIC TOC Team Lead

On May 23, the TIC TOC Committee hosted a Kick-off event to introduce Trauma Informed Care to the staff. Dr. Michael Gomez presented on vicarious trauma and the ACES study was also introduced.

As part of the event, a safe and secure environment survey was distributed as well as made available through ADP. This survey was designed by the National Council for Behavioral Health as a tool to provide the Committee specific information about the Center in order to begin to address those areas that the staff believe need the most attention. Since then, the Committee has been working diligently to address those identified areas.

One of those was the request to incorporate an EAP back into TPC’s array of benefits. Bud Schertler, Executive Director, submitted the proposal to the Board of Trustees and it was approved at the July 11 Board meeting.

The Employee Assistance Plan (effective September 1, 2019) will include mental health, financial and legal counseling and consultation to employees and their household members. The goals of the program are to help employees develop productive ways of dealing with stress related to work conditions, marital and family difficulties, cross-cultural concerns, drug and alcohol problems, nutrition, weight control, smoking cessation and relapse prevention.

Confidentiality - The strictest of confidentiality will be maintained according to the American Psychological Associations and Employee Assistance Professionals Association’s Codes of Ethics as well as following all HIPAA requirements.

Access—Employees will have access to confidential help on a 24-hour basis seven days a week including holidays.

Referrals—If further therapy or care is needed beyond the contracted sessions, the staff is well versed in the referral sources available. Every effort will be made to take the employee’s personal and financial status, as well as access to insurance into consideration when a referral is indicated.

Financial Services—Employees and family members may use some of the EAP sessions for financial counseling. Whether planning for retirement or saving for college. The financial professionals are available to help EAP members understand their financial issues including:

Mental Health First Aid
Toby Wallace, Human Resources Director

In a collaboration between Texas Panhandle Centers and Texas A&M AgriLife, the organizations partnered together to offer a Youth Mental Health First Aid Instructor class for Texas A&M AgriLife’s extension agents, educators in the community and other mental health professionals in the Texas Panhandle. The instructor class was a weeklong class (35 ½ total hours), taught by Gina Ehler and Jermine Alberty from the National Council For Behavioral Health. The class was well attended, in which 25 instructors were certified to teach the program.

The National Council for Behavioral Health is the unifying voice of America’s health care organizations that deliver mental health and addictions treatment and services. Together with our 2,900 member organizations serving over 10 million adults, children and families living with mental illnesses and additions, the National Council is committed to all Americans having access to comprehensive, high-quality care that affords every opportunity for recovery. The National Council introduced Mental Health First Aid USA and more than 1 million Americans have been trained.

Mental Health First Aid USA

Mental Health First Aid is an evidence-based, in-person training program with proven ability to teach individuals how to recognize and respond to the warning signs of mental illness and substance use disorders and link people with appropriate treatment and support. Mental Health First Aid increases the understanding that mental illnesses are real, common and treatable.

The National Council’s goal is to make Mental Health First Aid as common as CPR. Originating in Australia in 2001, Mental Health First Aid has expanded to more than 23 countries worldwide. Since the program was first introduced in the United States in 2008, more than 11,000 instructors have been certified to teach the program and hundreds of thousands of Americans have now been trained as Mental Health First Aiders.

Mental Health First Aid is included on the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration’s National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices (NREPP).

Mental Health First Aid USA is managed, operated, and disseminated by the National Council for Behavioral Health and the Missouri Department of Mental Health.

The National Council for Behavioral Health is teaming up with Lady Gaga’s Born This Way Foundation to bring teen Mental Health First Aid (tMHFA) to the United States. This fall 2019, they are expanding this evidence-based program to reach more than 20 high schools, empowering young people to support each other in times of need or crisis.

When temperatures start to rise, so do heat related injuries and heat related deaths. Some individuals are more prone to heat related illness than others. Some of the things that can put an individual at an increased risk for heat related injuries include overweight/obesity, certain types of medications, not drinking enough water, prolonged exposure to extreme heat and not getting enough rest, all of which can influence your body causing it to work harder than normal. We would like to provide you with tips and information to keep you, your family and the individuals we serve happier, healthy and out of harm’s way. You can find more in-depth information on signs, symptoms, vulnerable populations and additional tips by following the link to the CDC website at https://www.cdc.gov/disasters/extremeheat/index.html

Remember to get plenty of rest whenever possible when working or exercising in the heat. Ensure that you drink six to eight fluid ounces of water each day and check with your primary care physician before starting any exercise regimen to identify any undiagnosed medical conditions that may increase your risk to heat stroke or injury. Never leave children and/or pets in hot cars at any time as this could result in death or irreversible brain damage.

Here is the compliance question of the month:

If you have a question/scenario that you would like to be considered for inclusion in the newsletter, email the information to Compliance.Corner@txpan.org.

Question:

I was told I can’t use colored pens to write in any record, even training records. Is this correct? I thought the only thing I couldn’t use colored pens for was to write in client records.

Answer:

Use black or blue ink to document. Do not use pencil or colored ink pens (e.g. green, purple, red, pink, glitter, etc.). NEVER use white-out on documentation of any kind. Blue is preferred due to black ink being difficult to differentiate from a photocopy.

Black or blue ink should be used on all agency documents, to include: documentation in client record, training records/logs or any information submitted to other staff/supervisors.

Client Rights Point to Ponder
Jana Campbell, Rights Protection Officer

Clients/individuals must always be spoken to with dignity and respect. When speaking to clients we need to remember that our tone, volume, and body language are important. We should never use phrases that might humiliate. We should never engage in a shouting match with a client. Your volume should always remain at a normal level. Remember to speak to clients in a calm, positive way. Be mindful of your body language, arms crossed, or snapping your fingers does not give out a positive message. We should always try to use person first language. Person First Language respectfully puts the person before their diagnoses. Stay away from “icky” words, such as autistic, epileptic, schizophrenic instead say “a person with autism”, “a person with epilepsy”, “a person with schizophrenia.” Words do matter, and even though we all make mistakes, please try to keep your words kind and respectful. I would like to hear any questions you might have regarding client’s rights, abuse neglect, or exploitation. You can call me at 351-3400, or email: jana.campbell@txpan.org

Grass Clippings: To Leave or Not to Leave?

Good news: you have permission to leave grass clippings on your lawn after you mow. This can save you time if you rake them by hand, and a fewer stops if you collect them as you go. In fact, it’s actually better for your lawn when you leave the clippings alone, as they help return nitrogen to the soil. According to the National Association of Landscape Professionals, clippings do not contribute to thatch buildup if you mow regularly and properly. Some other tidbits from the organization: A lawn of 1,000 square feet can produce 500 pounds of clippings in one growing season, and these clippings contribute very little to thatch (the roots, stems, and lower portions of leaves that are below the mower blade). Fertilizer use can be reduced by 20 to 30 percent when clippings are left on the lawn, as they quickly decompose and release valuable nutrients such as nitrogen. If mowing is delayed by prolonged periods of rain or other reason, the clippings can be enough to shade or smother grass. In that case, you should rake, bag, and remove them. As for mowing in general, you should change direction often so as not to cause ruts in your lawn from the weight of the mower; and you should overlap each mowing pass to ensure a clean cut.

JoAnn Watson, BH Intake, Screening & Crisis, answered last month’s questions correctly and was randomly selected to win a $25 gift card from Amarillo National Bank.

To claim your card, contact Joyce Lopez-Enevoldsen at 806.351.3308 or email: joyce.lopez@txpan.org.
